

Susan Griffin Ward: A native of Louisville, Susan Griffin Ward fell in love with the Ohio River 25 years ago—and it has been a source of joy, beauty, and adventure ever since. Harlan and Anna Hubbard’s river way of life is deeply inspiring to her and she is committed to preserving their legacy at Payne Hollow. Susan’s professional career has been dedicated to nonprofit service at environmental and social service organizations. She currently serves as the Director of Community Engagement at Kentucky Waterways Alliance and serves on the Ohio River Way board of directors. Susan is a photographer and author of the book, Looking for the Sun at Merton’s Corner, a Collection of Portraits. In their free time, Susan and her husband, David, spend as many hours as possible canoeing, kayaking, and boating on Kentucky’s beautiful rivers and streams.
